“A conference with all amenities and up to date knowledge at its best”

-Nicolai Cocergine
Chairman of Montana Retail Store Employees Health & Welfare Trust
Greetings from Leavitt Great West Insurance Services,

2014 marks the fourth year that our company will be hosting our Health Insurance Conference in Big Sky, Montana. 2013 was a year of massive change in our industry and we are finding that the ACA (aka ObamaCare) is driving business decisions—some we envisioned and others we did not anticipate. That said, 2013 was a year where health insurance expertise was valued at an all time high.

We are very proud to have helped launch the MT Health Coop (MHC) and the National Alliance of State Health Coop’s (NASHCO), Montana’s exchange rates for the products offered on the Exchange are about half of what the same products cost in our neighboring states – we think this is because there is competition in our state.

This year’s conference is titled Show Me the Money. What our clients are telling us time and again is “please help us find ways to reduce the spend in our health plans”. We have been and continue to be committed to that initiative. You will find that the speakers at this years conference will provide insights and strategies to do just that.

Sincerely,

Jim Edwards, Partner, Leavitt Great West Insurance Services

“A 1,000 Dollar Toothbrush”
For over a decade, Preferred Provider Networks (PPN’s) have been one of the primary sources for employers to rely on to reduce their health care costs. However, with the dramatic markup of health-care services at the provider level, negotiating discounts off of services marked up 300% is no longer effective. During this session we will introduce a creative and rapidly growing trend in the way that self-funded employer plans are paying for healthcare, on a CostPlus basis.

“Montana domiciled cell-captives -- how they can work for your organization”
Captives allow businesses the multiple advantages of retaining underwriting profits, fine tuning risk management while also providing for superior tax efficiency. When a captive can offer protection to third parties, whether they are customers or employees, the captive insurance company can also serve as a profit center to the organization.

Bill will provide insights on captives and share examples of captive leveraged business strategies. Through an exploration of their opportunities and challenges, Bill will explain how companies just like yours are leveraging captives to improve efficiencies and take the edges off of everyday business challenges.

“Money Ball—How to play the game and make your health plan dollars count”

Managing large employer sponsored health plans in the new era of no annual or life-time limits is a more daunting task than it’s ever been. Understanding the healthcare delivery system, how to navigate it and how to contract into the health care system for the betterment of your health plan, is paramount to managing any large health plans spend.

Imagine running your business without the benefit of knowing where or why you were spending money; every month you simply get a report showing you incurred $50,000 of expenses or $100,000 of expenses, and that this amount is due and payable. It would be impossible to make changes, to reallocate resources, or to fix or even find the problem areas.
